SAYING SORRY

------	--

The word “sorry” comes from the Old English “sarig” meaning “distressed” or “full of sorrow”. It was first recorded in the 13th century. Originally “sorry” was used only to express sorrow, however, as time passed British people started to use it also to apologise or show politeness. That’s why nowadays Brits often say “sorry” when they themselves have done nothing wrong, for example when someone else steps on their foot, or when something is not their fault, for example when the weather is bad.

A recent survey of 1,600 British people and Americans showed that there are 15 British apologies for sneezing or bumping into someone in comparison to 10 American ones. The British are also more likely to apologise if they are late. 84% of Brits apologise in this situation compared to 74% of Americans.

4.3.
------	--

It seems that it’s important for British people to show good manners towards others in public. They feel uncomfortable when they have to tell you something negative directly, so if they want to disagree or express a different opinion, they usually start by saying “sorry”, hoping it will make their comment less unfriendly and you won’t be offended.

4.4.

In a recent experiment carried out in the US, an actor was asked to stop strangers on a rainy day to ask if he could use their mobile phone to make a call. In half of the cases, the actor began: "Sorry about the rain". When he did so, most people let him use their mobile, but when he simply asked to borrow their phone, only 9% agreed. So starting with "sorry" is a good way to get people on your side!

Tekst 1.

SAFE AND SOUND

Shortly all cars sold in the USA will be able to brake by themselves. From 1st September 2022, all new cars will have an innovative emergency braking system. The brakes will be automatically activated to make the car stop if there's a risk of collision. Experts hope it will reduce the number of accidents. It's another step towards greater road safety. However, you should always remember that sensors and video cameras don't mean that you shouldn't be careful at all times!

adapted from Kid Magazine 3/2017

5.1. The text is about

- A. safety-improving technology that will assist drivers.
- B. an innovation that will make drivers more careful.
- C. road safety rules that will be introduced soon.

Tekst 2.

NOT EVERYONE HAS TO BE A DRIVER

Every day my parents used to tell me I had to get my driving licence ... EVERY DAY! They used to give me a lift to school in the mornings, on their way to work, and I hated it! Each time they saw a friend of mine driving, they turned to me and said: "When are you going to get YOUR driving licence, Lucas?" I ignored them and went about my usual morning travel routine, mainly listening to music and looking through the window. After some time, I couldn't stand the same question every morning so I began to take public transport.

adapted from A Nobody's Heart by Jessica Powles

5.2. Travelling to school with his parents, Lucas

- A. couldn't stand the music which was played in the car.
- B. dreamt of getting his driving licence.
- C. felt irritated by their remarks.

Tekst 3.

CARPOOLING

Carpooling means sharing car journeys so that more than one person travels in a car. When more people use one vehicle, this reduces each person's travel costs and the amount of traffic on the road. Starting this academic year, the University of Rochester is offering free parking if you travel with three or more people. You don't know who to carpool with? Our new app allows you to find a carpool to join, or to share your own car. Don't hesitate, download the University Carpool App now! Save money and the environment!

adapted from www.uow.edu.au, www.rochester.edu

5.3. The author of this text

- A. gives advice on safe carpooling.
- B. encourages readers to begin carpooling.
- C. discusses the advantages and disadvantages of carpooling.

A STEP BACK IN TIME

What would you do if you discovered a shop that looks like a fashion museum full of untouched vintage shoes dating back more than 70 years? You could put it on the Internet of course! That's exactly what one anonymous man, who calls himself "John Smith", did. He set up a website and posted there photographs of the inside of his family's old shoe shop, which was open for business from the 1940s until the 1960s. It had belonged to his great-grandmother. His grandparents own the building in which the shop was located and they still live upstairs.

"When I was a child the rooms downstairs were locked. They had dusty windows behind steel bars so I couldn't see inside, and I wasn't really interested in what was there anyway. However, as I grew up, I became curious and asked my grandfather what exactly was hidden in those locked rooms. I found out that it had once been a shoe shop. It used to be run successfully by my great-grandmother. When she fell ill over 50 years ago, it closed. It never re-opened because everyone else in the family already had their own careers or had moved to other cities. Nobody was willing to manage the shop or to employ someone to do it," John explains.

Not long ago he got the keys from his grandfather and went to explore the shop on his own. "My grandfather said I could do whatever I wanted, even take all the shoes and just throw them away. Behind the steel bars and dusty shop windows I found over a thousand boxes of shoes. While most of the leather shoes looked and felt like new and were comfortable to wear, all shoes with rubber soles, including sports shoes such as trainers, were so stiff that they couldn't even be bent. The heat and dry air had probably damaged them."

Unfortunately, at the moment, for health and safety reasons, John does not plan on opening the old shop to the public. He says that the family are discussing what to do with their huge piece of fashion history. So far, they have sold about fifty pairs of shoes to a company which rents out theatre costumes.

adapted from www.messynessychie.com

6.1. The shoe shop was located in a building which

- A. houses a museum nowadays.
- B. is also John's grandparents' home.
- C. fell into ruin between 1940 and 1960.
- D. was found by John thanks to the Internet.

6.2. The shoe shop had to be closed because its owner

- A. had health problems.
- B. moved to another place.
- C. had gone bankrupt.
- D. chose a different type of career.

6.3. When John became an adult, his grandfather

- A. showed him around the old shoe shop.
- B. ordered him to get rid of the shoes from the shop.
- C. decided to sell the shoe collection.
- D. allowed him to look around the shoe shop.

6.4. Which is TRUE about the shoes in the shop?

- A. Most of the trainers are in perfect condition.
- B. Hot, dry air kept all of them in good condition.
- C. The majority of the leather shoes are in poor condition.
- D. Their condition depends on the material used to make them.

6.5. The author of this text

- A. tells the story of an unusual discovery.
- B. describes a recently opened shoe shop.
- C. talks about the history of footwear.
- D. presents a plan to open a museum.

AN UNEXPECTED VICTORY

Sometimes it pays to finish last. That was the case for one Japanese child who won first place in a 3-kilometre run despite being the last to cross the finishing line. The run was for children from primary and secondary schools. As usual the older students started first, and then, two minutes later, primary school children followed. 7.1. ____ However, this year the teenage group was much smaller and ran faster so the primary school runners quickly lost sight of them. Without anyone to guide them, the kids went the wrong way, which was much shorter. 7.2. ____ The competition organisers, surprised that so many primary school children crossed the finishing line before older students, quickly discovered what had happened.

The only primary school pupil who didn't get lost along the way and ran the whole distance of 3 kilometres was awarded the first prize in the primary school group. Unfortunately for the other runners in the group, the run couldn't be repeated because the organisers saw that many of the younger children were tired and upset. 7.3. ____ This way the organisers managed to avoid more tears.

To make sure this situation doesn't happen again, the organisers have decided to put up clear signs along the route in future competitions.

adapted from <http://runningmagazine.ca>; <http://japanrunningnews.blogspot.com>

- A. As a result, 262 of the 263 primary school runners ran only 1.8 km and not 3 km.
- B. The organisers decided that everybody would run again.
- C. A staff member complained that only one primary school pupil had managed to run the correct course.
- D. To cheer them up prizes were also given to the first three finishers who had run the shorter route.
- E. This was to make sure that the younger children could always see the older ones in front of them.
