Man: Hi, John! I know you enjoy using your digital camera to take pictures and record videos when you go cycling. Well, I'm taking my family on a road trip around Europe this summer, and I think I should get a good camera for the trip. Maybe you could tell me what to look for? Are there any cameras that you particularly recommend? Please call me back when you have a few minutes to spare!

Woman: I love taking my family on long road trips during the summer holidays. While we're travelling, my husband usually sleeps a lot, the kids play games or watch films, and I listen to music. I've got a high quality sound system in my car. If I get a bit sleepy when I'm behind the wheel, I put on upbeat songs and that always helps. I also stop regularly at petrol stations to get some coffee.

Man: Well, you see, it all begins when Olive learns that she has qualified for a beauty contest in California and her family sets off in their van to get her there. The main characters, played brilliantly by famous actors, include her anxious mother, her forgetful father, her naughty brother, and her funny uncle who always wakes up too late. Along the way, the van breaks down and they end up leaving Olive at a petrol station. And that's not the end of their problems! Believe me, the ending is quite surprising. Go and find out for yourself. I've already seen it twice.

Woman: Well, my father loved taking us on trips during the summer holidays. Once, he rented a huge camper van. We were all so excited when we set off, and thought that we would reach our destination without any difficulties! But the first bridge we came to was too low for our vehicle. By the time we managed to turn around there was a huge traffic jam behind us and some drivers started shouting at us. I felt so embarrassed!

Woman: I'm sure you've heard of Black Friday and Cyber Monday, which take place every year. They were created to motivate consumers to spend lots of money on different products. However, there is another day called Giving Tuesday. On that day people are encouraged to do something good for others. It is held either on the last Tuesday of November or the first Tuesday in December. But the rule is that Giving Tuesday must always follow Black Friday and Cyber Monday. Giving Tuesday was started on November 27, 2012. Believe it or not, on that day over $10 million was donated to charities. Apart from giving money, there are many other ways to take part in Giving Tuesday. If you're looking for ideas, some are suggested on the Giving Tuesday website. For example, you can do the week's shopping for an elderly neighbour or donate used clothing and toys to local charities. You can also do something good together with your friends. And to encourage other people to follow your example, you can share the different acts of kindness on your social media.

Man: We have a special guest in our studio today. Evelina De Lain – a professional pianist and... a record breaker. Welcome, Evelina. Can you tell our listeners about the record you broke?

Woman: Hello, everybody. Well, I set the world record for performing the highest ever classical music concert. I played the piano 5,000 metres up in the Himalayas.

Man: That's incredible. Where did the idea of doing that come from?

Woman: Well, I didn't plan to do it. It just happened. One day, I went to a piano shop in London to buy a piano chair. There I saw a beautiful grand piano. It looked so incredible that I just sat down and started to play it. Desmond, the shop owner, told me about his project of organising piano performances in the world's most remote places. His next destination was the Himalayas and he proposed that I could play there. I had never thought about playing a piano that high up, but I felt honoured and... I agreed.

Man: Was it difficult to play in the Himalayas?

Woman: It was one of the hardest things I've ever done. It was incredibly cold because of the height, but I'd come prepared, so the low temperatures weren't a problem. But at one point it was so windy that I thought I was going to be blown off my chair. And that was what I found most frightening and difficult.

Man: And my last question. Do you have any thoughts you would like to share with our listeners?

Woman: Actually, I do. You see, when I was 14, I lost the ability to move my hands. I sometimes doubted I'd be able to play the piano again, but after a lot of therapy, I got better. So, my story shows that sometimes what feels impossible is actually possible! The important thing is never to lose hope.

Zadanie 3.

Can I have your attention, please? I know that many of you are considering taking a gap year. Well, I believe that a gap year can be very beneficial if you spend the time productively, for example by doing volunteering work. If you're passionate about sport and a healthy lifestyle and love working with kids, here is a project just for you – taking care of children in Samoa. The project runs all year round, and you can join at any moment. The typical length of time a volunteer spends in Samoa is six months, but a shorter stay is also possible. The minimum period we require is three weeks. You don't need any professional childcare experience or qualifications. We will provide you with training, workshops and resources. Basically, you'll work at local care centres or kindergartens, where you will help teachers in their daily work by engaging in different activities like organizing sports. In Samoa, some diseases like diabetes are on the rise. This is mainly caused by unhealthy diets and a lack of exercise. So, you'll also be responsible for teaching children how to prepare healthy meals, so that they can share their knowledge with older family members. You won't have to stay at hostels or hotels because we will arrange for you to live with a host family. They will welcome you into their home and you will have the chance to learn local customs and culture. Classes usually start at around 8.30 a.m. You cannot expect your host family to drive you to work in their car so you'll have to use public transport, which is safe and reliable. In your free time you can meet up with other volunteers and explore the beautiful Samoan Islands. Now, are there any questions?
